Rectory Notes - Green

I used to think lambs were only the tiny, cute things skipping merrily around the fields on spindly legs. They wouldn't offer much meat, though. Now I know to recognise them in their guise as the hefty adolescents currently grazing our lush green fields. Before long their environment will switch from the tasty green of grass to the tasty (for us) green of mint sauce.

Our beautiful green Devon – how fortunate we are to live here. Being May, green growth has exploded. Take your eye off the garden ball for a moment and the grass has shot up and weeds magicked into giant-and-the-beanstalk size. The Big Green Wheelie-bin, if we're lucky enough to have one, isn't Big Enough. So it's off to the recycling centre.

'Green' isn't just a colour these days. It's a philosophy. It's recycling – those wheelie bins and kitchen caddies. It's reducing our carbon footprint. It's caring about the planet. It's caring about the people who live on the planet, because it's our only home. Green is a caring colour.

The Feniton community is running an important campaign to purchase the sports field and land on which the sports and social club sits. The green space needs to be secured for future generations. My primary school in London was blessed with a sports field, which I was sure would have been sold off long ago as prime development land: but thankfully no, Google Maps reassures me it's still there. Green is a caring colour.

'He makes me lie down in green pastures,' wrote a poet 3,000 years ago. Green was a caring colour then too. 'The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want.' For we are rather like sheep, needing care from someone who understands (and sometimes more like them in the stupid-department than we like to admit!). Thankfully, unlike our local lambs, our destiny doesn't involve mint sauce. Rather the opposite – 'He restores my soul' – the Shepherd who cares infinitely and forever.

God seems, then, to be green, the caring colour. May our souls be restored by the Spring green around us. And may we, like the sheep in the fields around us, find sustenance for our souls in the proverbial green pastures designed just for us.

Payhembury Weather

Weather for March 2026

Rainfall: In contrast to the previous two months March was a dry month with only half the normal rainfall. There were only 2 days of significant rain. April has continued this dry trend with only showers some with Saharan dust perhaps related to the storm mentioned below.

Temperatures: March once again has been a warm month well above the average reaching 18 degC on 18th March. In early April we had a single day of summer reaching 25 degC on 8th April but it was only 13 degC the following day, quite a contrast. On 13th April an air frost threatened the new blossom on fruit trees.

Weather elsewhere: A 1600 km (1000 miles) long sandstorm swept across parts of Morocco, Algeria, and Mauritania on 30th March before it moved into the Atlantic Ocean. It produced a huge wall of dust that engulfed everything in its path. There is concern over the future of emperor penguins as after 2021, Antarctic sea ice extent has declined sharply, falling to a record low of 1.79 million km² in 2023. Despite some sea ice recovery reported in West Antarctica in 2025, the E. Peninsula remains in deficit, with scientists struggling to find any traces of emperor penguins. Over France storms Goretti, Ingrid, Nils and Pedro arrived in quick succession through January and February, that brought exceptionally wet conditions to many parts. In fact, after 40 consecutive days of rain between 14th January and 22nd February, a new French national record was set for the longest run of rainy days since measurements began in 1959.

Payhembury Weather March 2026

Paul's Nature Notes

Trump's War led to the cancellation of our return flight from the Seychelles and we were left to fend for ourselves. Instead of returning through a war zone we came back via Mauritius. Waiting in the airport there I fell into conversation with Mike from Anglesey who shared my passion for wildlife. He asked me if I thought the massive decline in species numbers over recent decades would continue and where this would lead. I did not immediately answer, but eventually I said unless there is the political will to reverse these trends, which is currently sadly lacking, then yes we will see many more extinctions.

Then, only a few days later it was announced that rewilding has been linked to dramatic increases in birds and insect life across Scotland. Here in Devon we are witnessing many large housing developments which will inevitably lead to habitat destruction but we are blessed with dozens of rewilding schemes. Not everyone agrees with the concept, arguing that it is wrong to remove valuable land from agriculture. They have a valid point but if done well I see no reason why the two cannot exist alongside each other. So, perhaps there is a glimmer of hope....

The Seychelles was an interesting experience from a wildlife perspective. There is a low diversity of native land birds due to its isolation and adverse human impact in terms of habitat destruction and the introduction of invasive species like rats and cats. It puzzles me though why the dozen endemic bird populations are not present in greater numbers. Seabirds, on the other hand, are present in very large numbers but only on some of the smaller, uninhabited islands where human interaction is strictly controlled. I loved the lush tropical vegetation and large number of fruit trees but climate change is affecting nature there as well.

One of the outstanding moments was when we rescued a globally rare and critically endangered baby Hawksbill Turtle from three village dogs and helped usher it into the sea. Such moments are simply magical and that one will remain with me forever.

Tabletop Sale Trail

Our next fundraising event, taking place on Saturday, 11th July, the church is planning to organise a tabletop sale. Anyone in the village can put a table outside their house with goods for sale (or even open their garage) and buyers can wander from house to house (map provided) to pick up some bargains. The church will be providing cream teas.

For those who do not live in the village, tables can be put out on the village green or possibly in the village hall or school field, or you could share with a friend. We hope perhaps the school may be interested in taking part? Please reach out! We will charge a fee of £10 per table. Children are encouraged to have their own table at £2 each. Please contact Christine Thair (01404 841322) or Babs Leach (01404 841409) to let us know if you would like to be involved, so we can gauge uptake.

Community Questionnaire Have Your Say

In the coming weeks, a Community Needs Questionnaire will be delivered to homes around the village. This is an opportunity for everyone to share their thoughts about what makes our village special, as well as any challenges people may be facing. St Mary's Church has long been at the heart of village life, and this questionnaire will help shape how the church can continue to serve and support the community in meaningful and practical ways.

Whether you are closely involved with church life or not, your views are important, and all responses will be treated in confidence. This initiative comes ahead of the Thy Kingdom Come global week of prayer, starting on the 14th May; a time when we are especially encouraged to reflect, pray, and reach out to others. The church will be open through this time when you are welcome to access the various prayer stations or simply enjoy time of peace, quiet and reflection.

Alongside the questionnaire, there will also be an opportunity for anyone who wishes to complete a simple prayer request card. These can be filled in anonymously if preferred, and offer a way to share requests for prayer that you may have. Please do take a few moments to complete and return the questionnaire to the box in the Village Shop by 1st June. Your input will help guide future plans and ensure that the life of our village church continues to flourish for all. Thank you for taking part and being part of our community.

In Memoriam - Joy Morgan

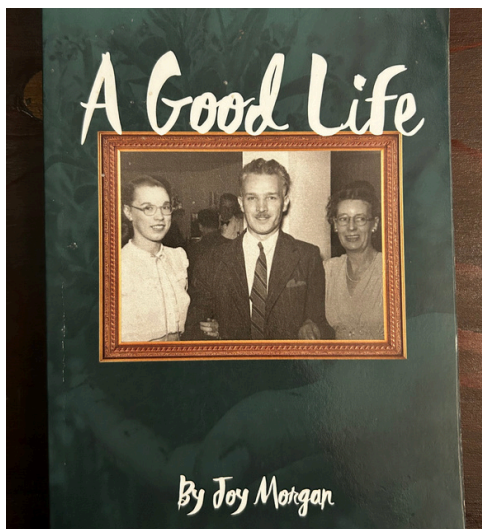

4th April 1930 - 17th March 2026

"Joy and I were friends for many years. I really got to know her when I took over as Chair of the Bulb Show. She taught me what to do to make it run smoothly, with Di's help. When I visited her, I enjoyed her stories about being evacuated during the war and the animals she had during her long life. She loved birds. There were always blue tits and finches on her feeders in her beautiful garden. When I told her how lucky she was, she nonchalantly told me she has a family of woodpeckers there every day! This is something I can only dream of coming to my garden. I suggested she write a memoir with the help of Lucy Pinney our resident village writer. I'm pleased she did as the finished book was excellent and she has left a legacy of her life."

Jane Wood

"It has been my greatest pleasure and joy to have had Joy as a friend and colleague over so many years. I can still remember the day Joy arrived at school as my volunteer classroom helper... It was the beginning of a very special friendship that lasted nearly 40 years until her sad passing. For 17 years she was my classroom treasure, my helper and my friend. Full of fun, practical advice, unfailing support and loyalty. The children loved her and so did we all. We had such good times together at work and at play. Even in retirement and advancing age, our friendship continued. Our meetings were always full of laughter, as Joy's ability to tell a great story, full of her life experiences, was without parallel. 'Joy by name and joy by nature' - a very special lady indeed. May you rest in peace my dear friend. You are forever loved and never forgotten."

Joan Wilkinson

Di has a copy of Joy's book 'A Good Life' if anyone would like to borrow it

“Joy and Vic met in Axmouth in July 1946 when she was 16 and he was 27. Joy had gone on holiday with her friend Eileen from Battersea in London to stay in a chalet at Warners Holiday Camp in Seaton. One evening they went to The Harbour Inn in Axmouth and met Vic and his cousin Roy. Vic at the time was in the Merchant Navy. They married on 24th April 1948 when she was just 18. They lived in Battersea, moved to New Addington and then Tatsfield in Surrey. They retired and moved to Penscombe at Hembury Fort Cross in the late 1980s and spent many happy years there until Vic died in March 2010.

Although not having children themselves (but many godchildren), Joy quickly became a regular and reliable volunteer at Payhembury School which she continued for many years. She helped children develop their reading as well as contributing to the Ofsted commended Art and Craft workshops, which were held every Thursday afternoon for all four years of Juniors. Throughout each term, small groups of Juniors rotated through a wide range of creative activities which included, pottery, felt-making, painting, collage, etc. Joy usually led the fabric and sewing-based workshops.

Her broad interests in art, craft and gardening were no doubt useful when she joined the Spring Bulb and Flower Show committee and always entered in it herself. One of the classes each year was for an Amaryllis. Apparently these bulbs require a lot of attention in order to produce winning blooms (dormancy, feeding, watering, forcing, etc). Well, one year Joy forgot she had left hers in a cool dark place during its dormancy period until very late and a bit too close to the show date, but in good spirit entered it any way. Joy's Amaryllis won!

She organised trips to the Northcott Theatre in Exeter and had a large group of friends in Payhembury. She was always interesting to talk to and had many visitors to her bungalow near Hembury Fort, where there were amazing views across to Dartmoor and Sidmouth.

She wrote a memoir of her life with the help of Jane Wood and Lucy Pinney called ‘A Good Life’ (a reference to the BBC television programme screened between 1972 and 1978, written by her cousin John Esmonde). After a few years of gradually declining health, with stays in hospital, Joy came home for three nights and died at home with a Marie Curie nurse by her side. Joy's beloved cat, Biddy, died on her bed just half an hour before Joy left this world.”

Village Hall News

We had Gaz Brookfield as the live event last month and I'm glad to say the hall was fully booked with over 80 ticket holders. Keep those bookings coming in for your parties and local events!

We are so lucky to have the hall keeping the local community and village alive, now summer is slowly but surely coming, it's a good time to support the many activities planned this year.

What have your Village hall committee been up to this weekend... well a pub adventure was in the plan later on in the day... of course. But first, we had two very run down storage sheds to deal with, chock-a-block with forgotten storage items. The shed roofs were on their last legs and the hall needed the extra room for hall items.

The posse were called in and through brilliant team work - despite battling high winds, hail and rain - the new sheet-metal roofing was installed. The sheds were repaired and rebuilt almost as good as new. Great effort and thanks to the posse members Sue and Ian Holmes, Kevin, Mark, Rob and Patrick.

Ottery St Mary Health and Wellbeing Forum

The Health and Wellbeing Forum are organising a community event at the Station Centre, Ottery St Mary on Saturday, 13th June. Are you or a member of your family a carer for a loved one? You may be a child carer, caring for a sibling or an adult carer, or just interested to know about the support available to you... Pop by and meet those who can offer support in various ways.

Maybe you'd like advice about Lasting Power of Attorney, sorting finances or more practical day-to-day support for you or your cared-for person. On the day, we will have space set aside for your loved one with a number of Ottery Help Scheme volunteers on hand to provide activities or to sit alongside and chat while you talk to exhibitors. We look forward to welcoming you on the day. If you would like more information please contact: jilldudding@otteryhelpscheme.org.uk

Volunteer Nail Cutters Needed

At Ottery Help Scheme, we provide a much needed toenail cutting service for local people who struggle to manage their own foot care and are not eligible for NHS provision. Demand for this service is growing and we currently have a waiting list, which is why we urgently need more volunteers.

Our nail cutting is carried out by volunteers who receive specialist training from an NHS podiatrist. While our volunteers are not professional podiatrists, they offer a safe, friendly and dignified service that makes a real difference to people's comfort and independence. To help us meet local needs, we're looking for caring and reliable volunteer nail cutters. The commitment is just three hours once a fortnight on a Friday and no experience is needed as full training is provided. If you enjoy helping others and would like to make a practical difference in your community, we'd love to hear from you. Please contact Ottery Help Scheme on 01404 813041 or info@otteryhelpscheme.org.uk
