Rectory Notes - Black

Black seems to be in. Black is fashionable. Black cars, black clothes, black décor. Black that's smart, sophisticated, classy. The black reminiscent of limousines, dinner suits, and James Bond. The black that conveys cool confidence.

BBC's Celebrity Traitors is screening. The vehicles bearing the contestants as they roll up to the castle seem somehow blacker than black. The traitors gather under black cloaks. For deceit lurks, and black is the colour of evil. It's a game, and I love the show.

Each month for the next twelve months in this column we'll have a different colour. Apparently our eyes can distinguish a million shades of colour, some as many as 10 million. This column could run a long time... Where else to start but black.

Black is Halloween. Shop shelves are stacked with black. Trick-and-treating may get going in daylight so children are less afraid (and adults too!). But Halloween belongs in the dark. For it delves the blackness. And it does so traditionally to banish the blackness, driving away the evil spirits as winter darkness encroaches. As Halloween ends, and All Hallows Day dawns, the exhortation is 'let there be light!'

'Let there be light!' spoke the Creator into the blackness of Nothing. And a Big Bang did the rest. Let there be light indeed – in the world's war zones, in disturbed minds and lonely hearts, in the long dark nights of those suffering chronic pain, in the dark corners of our lives where we dread to look but where light will in fact heal, onto the uncertain paths ahead, in the corridors of power which corrupts so easily, in the winter months ahead when light shines through festive joy.

'Back to black', sang Amy Winehouse, someone who tragically knew black as experience not as fashion. We're heading into Seasonal Affective Disorder time, for those especially affected by winter's darkness. But whatever our mood, may there be light. May there be colour. And even if a little premature, bring on those Christmas lights!

Coffee Morning

A very big thank you to Sue, Ian and Nellie for hosting our September Coffee morning, we were small in number and the weather wasn't kind but a very happy time was had by all. I had a quick walk through it on the way home, it was absolutely delightful! I can't believe we will be having our last Coffee morning of the year hosted by us (Sandra and Steve) at Honeypot, at 11-12pm on Wednesday, 19th November. Please come and join us, we guarantee a warm welcome, good company and excellent coffee. If any one would like to attend any of our events please phone Sandra or Steve on 841842 and we will happily arrange transport or directions.

Do you need some help?

The Payhembury in Need Relief Fund was set up many years ago to help people from the village with unforeseen expenses or to help in emergencies. Donations are often awarded to people to help with Christmas. Funds are available to help any villagers with unexpected financial hardship or need. For example, we could help pay for transport if finances make it difficult to visit a close friend or relative in hospital. Maybe some people need help with paying for fuel for the winter, or are unable to afford some vital repairs or insulation for their home. The fund has been set up for anyone in the village who needs emergency financial help and all you need to do is contact Ian, who will be able to advise on what is available in the strictest confidence.

Weather for September 2025

Rainfall: September was a wet month but with all the rain falling in the first half of the month it seemed drier than it was. October started with some rain as storm Amy passed over on 3rd October but since then high pressure has ruled and kept it dry until the 19th.

Temperatures: Daytime temperatures were slightly above average whereas night-time slightly below average for September. So far there have been no frosts in Payhembury with the night-time values staying above zero right through to mid-October.

Weather elsewhere: Globally this September was the third warmest after 2023 (warmest) and 2024 according to the European climate service. In south-east China inland areas have neared 40 degC with Xiushui, in Jiangxi province, recording 38.9C on 10 October about 13 degC above average for early October. As of early September wildfires had consumed nearly 1 million hectares of land across Europe making 2025 the continent's most destructive season in almost two decades. A severe snow storm left around 900 hikers, guides and other staff stranded in difficult conditions on the Chinese side of Mount Everest on 6 October. A camper recalled having to clear the snow outside his tent every 10 minutes!

Payhembury Provisions Annual Volunteers Supper

What a special evening we all had in the village hall saying a 'One big THANK-YOU' to our wonderful band of volunteers at the annual supper. Without our amazing volunteers giving up their time week in week out for free, we would not have such a gem of a community shop in the village. Over 40 volunteers enjoyed a fabulous meal of coq au vin with dauphinois potatoes and mixed vegetables followed by fruit crumble and tiramisu, beautifully prepared by Ed East. During the evening, we thanked David and Roy for all their hard work and dedication to Payhembury Provisions as they are both stepping back from the shop committee after 13 years of service. They will be greatly missed.

A great shot of work being done on the weather vane on the church. This and our amazing cover image featuring an egret, were kindly sent in by Gina Cox.

Parish Council News

Remembrance Sunday – 9th November 2025

Please gather at the War Memorial at 10.55am on Sunday 9th November for the wreath-laying ceremony, which will be followed by a church service for those who wish to attend. If at all possible, could you please avoid parking near the War Memorial between 10am and midday on Sunday 9th November and minimise any vehicle movements during the event.

Applications for a grant from the Parish Council

Each year Payhembury Parish Council award a number of small grants to voluntary organisations and groups that support the residents of the parish in various ways. Previous recipients include Tale Valley Trust, Applepips, FoPs, EDBC, the Tea & Bingo group, TRIP, the Ottery Help Scheme, the Payhembury Relief Fund and others. If you would like to be considered for a grant this year, please complete the application form, which is available from the website (https://payhembury-pc.gov.uk/wp-content/uploads/simple-file-list/Policies/Policies-and-Procedures/Grant-awarding-policy-procedure-and-application-form-v1_0.pdf) or by emailing the Parish Clerk for a copy. Completed forms should be returned either via email to clerk@payhembury-pc.gov.uk, or to Payhembury Parish Council, c/o Rose Cottage, Payhembury, Honiton, Devon EX14 3HR by 31st December 2025. The Parish Council will consider these requests at the Parish Council meeting on Wednesday 14th January 2026.

Christmas Tree on the village green 2025

Again this year there will be a Christmas Tree on the Village Green. The plan is to put the tree up at the end of November in time for a switching on of the lights at 6pm on the Saturday 29th November, weather permitting. As in previous years the tree is coming from 'Higher Willand Farm Christmas Trees & Gift Shop'. If you are interested in getting a Christmas Tree from them for yourself, please contact them at Higher Willand Farm, Churchstanton, Taunton TA3 7RL, phone numbers 07815 059823 / 07818 462121. Many thanks again to Amy Shaw, Baked With Love by Julie, Chetwood Private Wealth, Luton Green Sawmill, P. Woodley Plumbing & Heating, The Studio Hair & Beauty and Tuck Mill Barns for their generous donations in 2022 that have paid for the Christmas Trees for 2022, 2023, 2024 and 2025!!

Paul's Nature Notes

I last delved into the miniature world of gall wasps back in early 2023 when I told you about three species: the Oak Marble Gall Wasp, the Oak Apple Gall Wasp and Robin's Pincushion Gall Wasp. All are really tiny and we are most unlikely to ever see the actual wasps but their presence is there for all to see.

The Oak Marble Gall Wasp produces hard, woody, marble-like balls that can be found on oak twigs, often in clusters. They turn brown as they mature and it is interesting to note the emergence holes. The Oak Apple Gall Wasp causes large, spongy galls on oak trees, which resemble little apples but Robin's Pincushion is quite different being a red, round, hairy growth which can occur on wild roses. I find it quite attractive and it is reasonably common around our lanes.

This year a fourth species has turned up. Its presence was first identified by Tim Cox in Colestocks - the Knopper Gall Wasp, Andricus quercuscalicis is a scant one-tenth of an inch in size and so yet another unlikely to be actually seen. It produces knobbly red-turning-to-brown growths or galls on the acorns of Pedunculate Oak (and what a year it has been for acorns). Tim's discovery led me to investigate the oaks in our own garden and there they were - dozens of deformed acorns strewn across the grass under the oaks.

No two years are ever the same in the garden and 2025 has been no exception. It has been an exceptional and very early year for the apple harvest. We started to pick some of ours up to six weeks earlier than usual. It has also been an amazing year in the veg garden but again, everything came early and our beans were all over by the end of September. For the second year in a row we have cropped finger aubergines growing in a sheltered spot outdoors, something unheard of in my grandfather's day, although truth to be said he had probably never heard of them!

Compassionate Care on Your Doorstep

Based in Tale in the parish of Payhembury, there is a company which has compassion at the centre of all it does. Care With Kindness was founded in 2020 by Chris and Mary Lorimer in response to caring for Mary's mother at home. "During mum's illness we struggled with no continuity of carers, carers coming in at unsuitable times and carers who seemed to be on a mission to break all speed records!" Mary explains. "We felt we needed to offer something different and Care With Kindness was born."

Care With Kindness supports clients across rural Honiton, Ottery St Mary, Cullompton and all the areas in between, helping older and vulnerable individuals stay safely and happily in their own homes. What sets us apart is our steadfast commitment to dignity, safety and personal choice.

Our carers are trained in optimal client-centred care, ensuring service is delivered with professionalism and trust. They are also encouraged to show their personality and build strong relationships with clients; often it can be the small, personal touches that make the biggest difference when it comes to care. At the heart of it all lies a genuine belief that caring is more than just a service; it is a commitment to kindness.

"We often hear that we go above and beyond from our clients and their families," says Sandra, who runs the office. "It gives us an immense sense of pride that we are supporting our local community."

We are currently recruiting local people to join our team of carers. If you're dependable, compassionate and eager to build relationships, expert-led training will ensure you're the best you can be.

"This role offers you the chance to make such a difference in others' lives," explains Sarah, who manages all the carers. "I come to work knowing that I have the opportunity to turn someone's day around and that builds real job satisfaction."

If you'd like to learn more, arrange to come in for a coffee and a chat with Sandra or Sarah (and if you see us out and about in our red tunics, do say hello!)

Tale Millers CC

So the cricket season ended and at last we had some rain and the grass grew, what a relief for the majority of us in different ways... For us, that last cut of silage that for so long looked unlikely, became a reality and having used up some of this years earlier cuts on the cattle, it's a mighty relief to have been able to top up supplies.

The rain has also this very morning brought two cricket balls flowing down the mighty River Tale, which will save the club a few pounds until someone turns up next summer and smashes them back into the river!

The Six Bells kindly hosted our AGM at the beginning of October (Thanks guys) and after 11-12 years in the role of Treasurer, Fred Brauer has hung up his calculator to become a full time groupie with local band The Revival, which alongside local lad, Oscar Nairn Clark, features Fred's son, Fred (its an American thing apparently to call your son by your name, bit confusing to a simple Devonian like me).

We have been incredibly fortunate to have Fred looking after our finances since we started the club so big thanks to Fred. Ruardiah Harrison has taken over Fred's role, whilst Ben Peters succeeds Penny 'Get-outta my pub' Hammett as Bar Manager. Again Penny has been a wonderful landlady, thank you. Ben certainly has big shoes to fill.

We are already planning for 2026 with fixtures coming in and groundworks progressing, whilst The Ashes down under will hopefully be a more competitive affair than we have managed down there in recent times.

Payhembury Village Hall

There will be a village hall meeting 7.30pm sharp on 3rd December - the hall committee's AGM. The resident general public are welcome.

Please note the use of the car park at the village hall is for hall users and school parent drop/pick up only. There are an increasing number of cars parked in the spaces in the day time which means that people using the hall for weekly activities are unable to park. This is particularly disruptive for users of the hall for pilates on Wednesdays between 9.30-11am.

In October we had a great talk on Willow Weaving by Richard Kerswood with a practical demonstration of plant supports and the beautiful baskets made by Suzanne.

On Wednesday 5th November Becca Flintham, and Environmental Educator at Wildwood, Escot will be speaking on "Water, Water, Everywhere". With climate change bringing gardeners extra challenges (in the form of not enough water or too much when it does arrive!) how can we garden in more water-wise ways, both for ourselves and for wildlife and the environment? Learn how we can make gardens more resilient to flooding and drought. Discover the value of ponds and bog gardens in helping wildlife, and some tips for plants and techniques to help make you a water-wise gardener. Becca has over 25 years experience working in environmental education with children and adults and has worked for National Trust and RSPB.

Doors open at 7.00 for 7.30pm at the Memorial Hall. Refreshments will be available and visitors are always welcome at £2 on the door. On 3rd December our speaker will be Andrea Rye on Exotic Spices.

Bridging the Digital Divide in Devon

A partnership between two Devon charities, Devon Communities Together and Wellmoor, has launched a new initiative to offer free support to people in Devon's rural and coastal communities with everyday online tasks. Digital Skills Devon, which is funded by the UK government through the UK Shared Prosperity Fund, provides personal, tailored support for individuals who are lacking skills and confidence in performing particular online tasks.

The project offers people the chance to have individual 1:1 support, advice to be able to support a member of their family or friends, or organisations the chance to receive bespoke advice tailored to them. For more information or how to access support, please contact Devon Communities Together on 01392 248919 or email info@devoncommunities.org.uk.

The Apple Tree - chapter 3

A short story by Jane Hugen-Tobler (Wood) continued from previous issue...

'Do you need to get changed?' The umpire offered him a towel.

'Thanks.' He dried his hair and hands. 'I'll be alright out here in the sun.' Gradually, the Payhembury batsmen got out and the innings ended with them scoring one hundred and forty runs.

'A respectable score, that,' Len wiped his damp trousers.

'I think we'll beat it,' replied Brian. 'Let's get some tea.'

'And another of these,' Len lifted his tankard. 'Lucky they was empty, or the cider might 'ave got watered down.'

Inside, the tent was full of chatter and intermittent waves of laughter. Only the corners of the cream-coloured tablecloth, lovingly embroidered with little sprigs of violets, were visible. An excited buzz rippled through as the ladies removed the cloths covering the food revealing plates of culinary treasure. Hungry cricketers helped themselves to mounds of sandwiches; some filled with thick ham and mustard and others bursting with golden egg mayonnaise. Beside them, triangles housing slabs of succulent sliced beef from the farm finished with a dab of fiery horseradish were being piled onto plates.

Elsie, the farmer's wife, was famous for her baking and making legendary cricket teas; most people were more excited about the food than the cricket, especially the children who tucked into sausage rolls with golden flaky pastry. Rising from the table were cut glass cake stands with white, lacy doilies. The first held a Victoria sponge oozing jam and cream, decorated with icing sugar. Close by, was a rich chocolate cake perfectly iced with creamy rose swirls and chocolate sprinkles. Slices of zesty lemon cake formed a spiral on the third. The centrepiece was a tower of large crumbly scones with thick clotted cream and scarlet strawberry jam (made the Devon way cream first and jam on top). The table glowed, proud to hold such a beautiful banquet.

The tree waited outside impatiently. Len and Brian's mouths watered at the glorious sight before them. They wasted no time stacking their plates, refilling their drinks, and wandered back outside in the sun. Len leaned back and rested his plate on his stomach. Neither of them spoke a word, the only sounds the tree heard were mumbles of appreciation at every bite, until their plates were empty.

'Now that's what I call a proper spread.'

The Apple Tree - chapter 3

'Can't beat a proper Devon cream tea. And washed down with the bes' pint.' Brian brushed the crumbs from his lap. Len removed his handkerchief from his head and wiped his mouth. 'There's nothin' better than sittin' in the sunshine, 'earing leather on willow and eatin' scones wi' jam and cream. They was bleddy lovely they was.'

'Right time for us to beat you.' Brian sat back to watch.

Once the Broadhembury batsmen, two of the Ellis brothers, were clapped onto the pitch, an argument ensued between the scorers.

'Bowler's name.' shouted Adam.

'It's Ben,' came the call from the field, 'and the other's Steve.'

'Why didn't you just ask me?' Jim looked wounded.

'I want to make sure I use the right colour for my dots.'

'Don't know why you do that anyway,' Jim pointed at the dots covering the page. Adam chose a different colour for each player, making it look like Smarties had exploded from their tube onto the pages.

'Better than your scrawl, no one can read.'

'What d'you think you're doin' anyway? Paintin' a picture.'

'What 'appened there?' demanded Jim.

'You missed two runs hit by Steve. Never take your eye off the ball.'

A loud roar came from the field in the form of an appeal for LBW (Leg before Wicket – a way of being out). The umpire rose from his stool removed his glasses, squinted at the wicket and waved his finger in the air.

'That was never out!' Brian stood up.

'I dunno. It was close.'

Ben walked off the pitch to the sounds of quacking from the opposition (getting out with no runs is called a duck).

'That's your bes' batsman gone.'

'Still got the Ringer. See if 'is battin's as good as 'is fieldin.'

The Ringer hit his first ball into the river sending boys, with a long-handled net, running to be the first to retrieve it. One eager small boy jumped in and held it up before throwing it back to the fielder. His mother strode over.

'I told you not to go in that water. You didn't even take your shoes and socks off. Whatever were you thinking?' She hustled him away and made him take his shoes off, pouring little puddles from them. 'Lucky it's warm, run around - you'll soon dry off.'
